

EAST LANE
THEATRE

Patrick Hamilton's

GASLIGHT

Bella Manningham, once a beauty but now pallid and withdrawn, suffers from what she believes are the early stages of insanity. Her husband, Jack Manningham, struggles to help her, and spends his evenings out on the town in order to cope. Bella evidently misplaces items from time to time, some of which are gifts from her husband, because she cannot remember moving or misplacing these items, she thinks she is going crazy. But what of the dimming lights and footsteps heard within the house while her husband is away?

Are these simply a figment of her delusional mind?
